Message from the Artist

Upon entering the room, I was immediately struck by the large windows. I envisioned a space where each wall had a window, so I designed the layout with that idea in mind. Windows serve as a bridge between the interior and the outside world, reflecting external landscapes. In that sense, paintings share a similar role by projecting scenes from the outside world.

I wanted to create a room where different landscapes could be enjoyed by placing window frames and paintings on each wall.

In my artwork, I often depict chairs as metaphors for people. By illustrating chairs or everyday objects, I aim to indirectly evoke the presence of their owners. For this room, I painted numerous chairs on the wall opposite the actual window, arranged like a group photo. At night, I hope the reflection of the chairs in the window will create a mysterious and intriguing atmosphere.

Message from the Artist

Our daily lives can become monotonous when overwhelmed by busyness. In search of the extraordinary and to encounter unfamiliar emotions, we travel.

From the window of this room, you can see Tokyo Tower, a skyline of buildings, and even Mount Fuji in the distance. The view filled me with excitement, as if I had stepped into a fantastical game world.

The girls painted on the walls play freely and joyfully in this park high above Tokyo. The room, designed with pastel hues and a dreamy atmosphere, offers a space where you can feel the extraordinary while relaxing.

Though the adventurous freedom of a game may not last forever, I want to always keep a heart that finds joy in daily life. And I sincerely wish for peaceful days where anyone can embark on a journey whenever you desire.

Message from the Artist

The name of this room, “Ametsuchi,” means “Heaven and Earth.” By layering the landscapes of the world we live in onto a space close to the sky-the hotel’s top floor-I have created a space where sky and earth converge.

The large painted characters represent the personification of nature itself, while the smaller characters symbolize invisible elements such as the memories and traces left by the land. The room encapsulates various landscapes, including waterfalls flowing down rocky cliffs, mountains and Mount Fuji, the sun and moon, birds soaring through the sky, and the ocean waves lapping at your feet. I hope that your stay in this room allows you to experience the essence of Japan’s natural beauty and the rich culture it has nurtured.
